

Expanding conceptualisations of occupational identity: drawing from the lived experience of homelessness

Cunningham, Miranda ; Slade, Anita

Citation for published version (Harvard):

Cunningham, M & Slade, A 2016, 'Expanding conceptualisations of occupational identity: drawing from the lived experience of homelessness', COTEC ENOTHE, Galway, Ireland, 15/06/16 - 16/06/16.

Link to publication on Research at Birmingham portal

Publisher Rights Statement:

Checked for eligibility: 17/06/2016

General rights

Unless a licence is specified above, all rights (including copyright and moral rights) in this document are retained by the authors and/or the copyright holders. The express permission of the copyright holder must be obtained for any use of this material other than for purposes permitted by law.

- Users may freely distribute the URL that is used to identify this publication.
- Users may download and/or print one copy of the publication from the University of Birmingham research portal for the purpose of private study or non-commercial research.
- User may use extracts from the document in line with the concept of 'fair dealing' under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 (?)
- Users may not further distribute the material nor use it for the purposes of commercial gain.

Where a licence is displayed above, please note the terms and conditions of the licence govern your use of this document.

When citing, please reference the published version.

Take down policy

While the University of Birmingham exercises care and attention in making items available there are rare occasions when an item has been uploaded in error or has been deemed to be commercially or otherwise sensitive.

If you believe that this is the case for this document, please contact UBIRA@lists.bham.ac.uk providing details and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate.

RESEARCH ORAL ABSTRACT COTEC-ENOTHE2016
EXPANDING CONCEPTUALISATIONS OF OCCUPATIONAL IDENTITY: DRAWING
FROM THE LIVED EXPERIENCE OF HOMELESSNESS

Miranda Cunningham¹, Dr Anita Slade¹

¹ School of Health Professions, Occupational Therapy, Plymouth University, PAHC, Derriford Road, Plymouth, miranda.cunningham@plymouth.a.uk

Word Limit: 249

Background:

Occupational identity (OI) is an emerging construct in occupational science. Critiques of OI suggest an over emphasis on achievement based doing and individual choice (Laliberte-Rudman and Dennhardt, 2008) consequently; there has been a move to broaden understandings of the construct (Phelan and Kinsella, 2009). This study aimed to expand the construct by exploring it from the position of a socially excluded population.

Method:

Data were collected from a sample of five men living in a homeless hostel in the UK and included semi-structured interviews and participant photography. Interpretative Phenomenological Analysis (Smith, Flowers and Larkin, 2009) was used to analyse the data.

Results:

Participants experienced a range of occupational engagement that influenced their identity. This included engagement in anti-social occupations that occurred as a result of homelessness and resulted in spoilt identities. Participants did not necessarily have control over their identity; both agency (the self) and structure (society/culture) influenced the participants' ability to engage in occupations which consequently impacted on identity. Engagement in previously enjoyable occupations supported positive identity maintenance. Participants also articulated aspirations for more positive future identities.

Conclusion:

Current conceptualisations of OI are too narrow to adequately describe the relationship between occupation and identity. A multi-layered understanding of both identity content and processes is required.

Application to Practice:

Spoilt identities impact negatively on well-being. Occupational therapists working with the homeless population should support people to engage in pro-social occupations in order to experience themselves in a positive way, which could support changes in identity and consequently wellbeing.

References

- Laliberte-Rudman, D. and Dennhardt, S. (2008) 'Shaping knowledge regarding occupation: Examining the cultural underpinnings of the evolving concept of occupational identity.' Australian Journal of Occupational Therapy. Vol 55 pp153-162.
- Phelan, S., and Kinsella, E. A.,(2009) 'Occupational identity: Engaging socio-cultural perspectives', Journal of Occupational Science, Vol 16 (2) pp85-91
- Smith, J. A., Flowers, P. and Larkin, P. (2009) Interpretative phenomenological analysis: theory, method and research. London. Sage.

Financial support by Plymouth University School of Health Professions is gratefully acknowledged.